AT FIRST GLANCE, THESE PRODUCTS LOOK SIMILAR

They both contain 425 mg of porcine pancreas per capsule, and the supplement facts look very similar, so it would be easy to assume the products are identical. A closer look reveals several important differences.

Feature	Professional Formulas Activated Pancreas	ARG Pancreas
Porcine pancreas per capsule	425 mg	425 mg
Raw glandular material has been Activated*	✓	No
Proprietary formula developed by Dr. Gonzalez	✓	No
Used in the Gonzalez Protocol®	✓	No

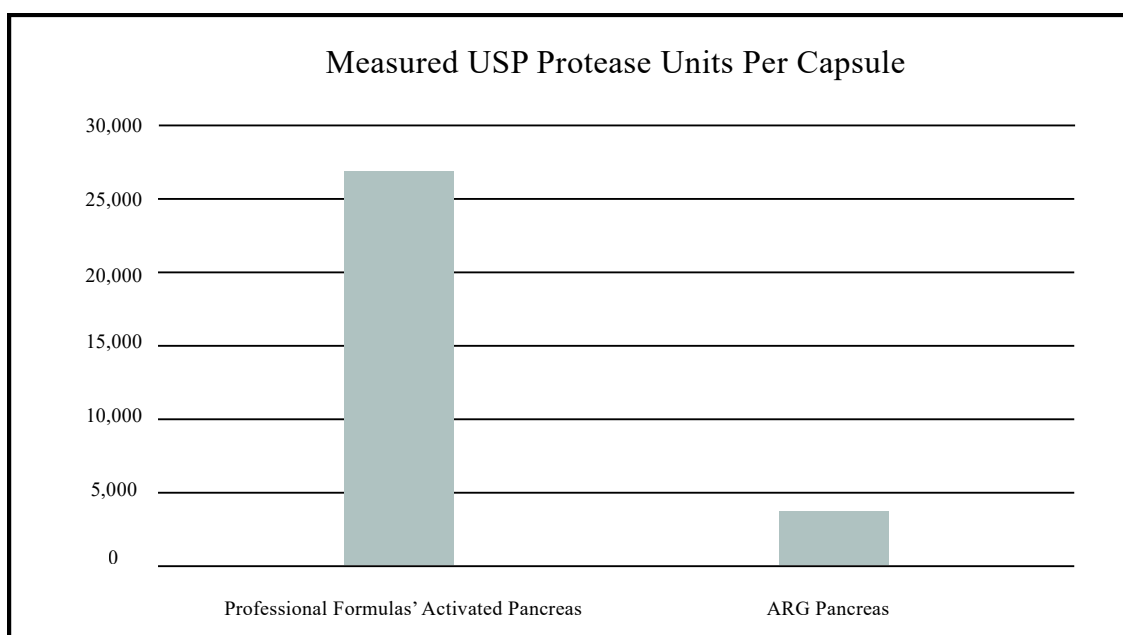

*The porcine pancreas glandular material used in Professional Formulas' Activated Pancreas is sourced exclusively from New Zealand and undergoes a proprietary process to activate it prior to encapsulation. The activation process was developed by Dr. Nicholas Gonzalez, MD.

Dr. Gonzalez's original formula, using his proprietary Activated Pancreas, is only available through Professional Formulas.

INDEPENDENT LABORATORY TESTING

To better understand the differences between Dr. Gonzalez's unique formula and other pancreas products, samples of each product were tested by an independent FDA-registered, ISO-certified laboratory.

Products were analyzed to measure USP protease activity, a standardized measure of important enzyme activity present in pancreatic tissue.

Results based on independent laboratory tests

Independent laboratory testing showed that Professional Formulas' Activated Pancreas provided 7.5–7.8 times higher USP protease activity (across five lots tested) than the ARG pancreas product, which does not contain Dr. Gonzalez's proprietary activated raw material.

THE BOTTOM LINE

The two products have very similar Supplement Facts and may even be manufactured to the same specifications. However, Independent lab tests confirmed that Professional Formulas' Activated Pancreas, which uses Dr. Gonzalez's proprietary activated formula, provides substantially higher protease activity than regular pancreas.
